NONCOMPLIANCE SUMMARY

On January 30, 2018, this officer met with the defendant at the U.S. Probation Office and reviewed all of his conditions of supervision, including his special conditions requiring advance notification, and monitoring of, any internet accessible device, as well as the special condition prohibiting him from owning, using, possessing, or controlling pornography of any kind while in sex offender treatment. The defendant stated that he clearly understood all of his conditions of supervision and would abide by them.

Later on that same date, this officer performed a routine home contact at the defendant's place of residence located at 547 Joseph Avenue, Rochester, New York. During that contact one pornographic magazine, one pornographic DVD, and a laptop computer were located in the defendant's room. At no time did he provide this officer with advance notification of the laptop computer. The defendant advised that his mother had purchased the computer for him prior to his last term of incarceration; however, she had never given it to him. He went on to state that the computer was with the rest of his possessions that he had picked up from his family upon his release from incarceration, and that he had not used the device. Regarding the pornography, the defendant stated that it was also mixed in with his property from prior to his last incarceration, and that he had unknowingly brought it, along with all of his other property, to his current residence. He stated that he knew he should not have had any of the above noted items, and that he had planned on getting rid of them. The pornography and laptop were seized at that time in order to allow for further review.

On Feb 12, 2018, the above noted computer was reviewed and found to be internet accessible. It also appeared that the defendant's comments about not using the device were true as there was no evidence that any of the programs, utilities, or other functions, on that computer had been used. These matters of noncompliance are being addressed through supervision and through sex offender treatment.
